RECASTING HISTORY

Tamil Nadu's startling claim of heralding the Iron Age, backed by evidence dating back to 3345 BCE, is not just about mastery over metallurgy but a challenge to the civilisational timeline

COVER STORY

The past reimagined

10/ Recent archaeological discoveries in Tamil Nadu indicate that iron smelting and usage in the region began as early as 3345 BCE. They also suggest the movement of both people and technology between southern Tamil Nadu and Harappan sites—a premise that could explain the region's leap despite the apparent absence of a distinct Chalcolithic period.
